JULY

The background of the poster is a photograph of three divers underwater. They are positioned around a large, vertical, silver metal cylinder. The diver on the right is in the foreground, looking directly at the camera through a large, oval-shaped diving mask. The other two divers are slightly behind and to the left. The water is dark and murky, with some bubbles visible. The overall tone is dramatic and mysterious.

The famous Bates-Reed wrestling match (R-1:29) p.14

What's Up, Doc?

Barbra Streisand and Ryan O'Neal are sheer delight as madcaps trailing bedlam in their wake. Peter Bogdanovich is at his peak re-creating zany comedy in the Hollywood style of the '30s. Madeline Kahn is the perfect foil as O'Neal's fiancée. Great clowns support the trio. "Daffy, lovable, richly entertaining." (Rex Reed) (PG-1:34) July 28, 31

HBO Soundtrack

Who wants to see "Annie Hall" six times?

Or, to put it another way, why does HBO show the same movie again and again? Good question.

It deserves a good answer. And our answer—our reasons, really—are just what make HBO so very special and unique.

We do show all movies and specials several times. On different days. At different hours. We're not like the commercial networks that schedule a one-shot and, months later, a re-run.

HBO programming is carefully worked out to give you a chance to see what you want to see, even preview programs for your family or friends. You can actually plan your viewing well in advance—so it doesn't interfere with other things you want to do. Like going out to dinner or a ball game.

Do you want to see everything HBO schedules? Probably not. Any more than you saw every movie released in a theatre before you became a subscriber. The point is, you may select those movies and specials you don't want to miss.

Of course, there are also avid fans who want to see their favorites half a dozen or more times. And that's O.K. with us, too.

Home Box Office reserves the right to make a schedule change or program substitution without notice.

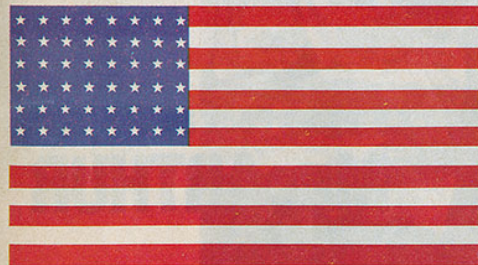

HBO welcomes letters from subscribers. Please address all mail to: Susan Dev-on, HBO Customer Relations Dept., Time & Life Building, Rockefeller Center, New York, N.Y. 10020
